Our work begins with YOU.
Dear Friends,

Nearly 130 years ago, the United Way movement started right here in Denver. Today, we couldn’t be more proud of the accomplishments Mile High United Way has achieved. Working side-by-side with passionate people like YOU, Mile High United Way tackles the big, complex, even daunting issues that face Metro Denver. We are so grateful for your support.

In 2014, we moved into the historic Curtis Park neighborhood and began our work in the Mile High United Way Morgridge Center for Community Change. We’ve welcomed more than 50,000 community members to the CoBank Leadership Center since opening our doors, including more than 33,000 individuals last year alone. Community members like YOU are working with us to forge unexpected partnerships and solve the big issues facing Metro Denver.

Together, we work toward our four Community Impact Goals, ensuring: children enter school ready to succeed; children are reading at grade level by the end of third grade; youth graduate from high school ready for post-secondary education or entry into the workforce; and individuals and families can meet their basic needs and have every opportunity to move toward economic success.

Last year, because of YOU,

- 1,200 young students who were struggling readers are now reading at grade level
- Mile High United Way’s 2-1-1 Help Center became the largest in the state, and now includes contracted school liaison services, child care referral, and job search resources
- Mile High United Way’s Bridging the Gap program impacted federal legislation to improve the way housing vouchers are administered for youth exiting the child welfare system

Your support made these accomplishments possible. When the full force of the Metro Denver community is UNITED, we can solve the big problems together.

Thank you, as always, for standing with us. We hope to see you soon.

Warm regards,

Mile High United Way, founded in Denver in 1887, was the first United Way in the world. We’re a community that thinks a little differently about solving big problems.

Our original, innovative spirit persists in our work and in our hearts. We continue to boldly break new ground by bringing together local businesses, nonprofits, government agencies, and the most important piece, YOU.
Mile High United Way is committed to finding solutions that allow everyone in our community to thrive. Whether we are encouraging people to use our 2-1-1 Help Center for support, providing collaboration space at our Mile High United Way Morgridge Center for Community Change, or working to change the odds in partnership with residents of Metro Denver’s vibrant, yet under-resourced neighborhoods, this commitment has driven us to engage our donors and volunteers in new ways to better serve everyone in Metro Denver.

As a community UNITED, with the support and generosity of donors like you, we made a positive impact on more than 350,000 people last year.

With sights set on the big, complex issues that face our community, we are working toward our four Community Impact Goals:

- Giving All Children a Strong Start
  Ensuring all children enter school ready to succeed.

- Reading Matters
  Ensuring all children are reading at or above grade level by the end of third grade.

- Developing Tomorrow’s Talent
  Ensuring all youth graduate from high school ready for post-secondary education or the workforce.

- Creating Economic Opportunity for All
  Ensuring people can meet their basic needs and have opportunities to move toward economic success.

We could not do this work without YOU.
TOGETHER, WE CREATE SOLUTIONS FOR COMPLEX PROBLEMS.

Families in Metro Denver face complicated challenges. YOU help create solutions.

Mile High United Way is different because of the role we play: we understand the complex issues facing individuals and families every day, and we work to align Metro Denver’s many and varied resources across the public, private, and philanthropic sectors, to find solutions that can have a long-term impact.

YOU are helping us change the odds for people around Metro Denver.

Meet Sarah and her two children.

Sarah is a single mother of two. Sarah rents a two-bedroom apartment for her family. With her job and other supports, she is able to cover her monthly expenses. However, Sarah knows that a single unexpected bill of $400 or more would force her to make tough decisions: food or rent? Healthcare or car expenses?

Sarah enrolled in financial literacy and job skills classes at a Mile High United Way Center for Family Opportunity, which gave her the confidence and skills to pursue a higher-paying job.

Sarah’s daughter Maria is 3 years old.

Maria is Sarah’s youngest, and she stays with a neighbor while Sarah works. Maria is one of Colorado’s 134,000 young children whose parents use Family, Friend, and Neighbor care.

Thanks to a program supported by Mile High United Way’s Social Innovation Fund, the neighbor who watches Maria takes classes to support Maria’s early learning and development.

Sarah’s son Jamie is a third grader.

By the end of second grade, it was clear that Jamie’s reading skills lagged behind his peers, so Sarah was thrilled when he began working with a tutor from Mile High United Way’s Colorado Reading Corps.

About 28 percent of Colorado’s third graders aren’t reading at grade level. Since third-grade literacy is a predictor of high school graduation, programs like Mile High United Way’s Colorado Reading Corps are critically important.

YOUR support made a positive impact on more than 350,000 Metro Denver individuals, like Sarah, last year.
Investing in children

At Mile High United Way, we are working to improve the odds for young children. Investing in high-quality early care and education for children improves their health and promotes development and learning. Thank you for your continued generosity to improve the lives of everyone in our community – especially our youngest residents.
Grade-level reading skills enable students to begin mastering other important subjects, like math and science. If they aren’t reading at grade level by the end of third grade, they risk falling behind.

Reading matters, and one in four Colorado third graders does not read proficiently at grade level.*

To ensure that children have access to early learning opportunities and support to meet their literacy targets, Mile High United Way provided Colorado Reading Corps tutors to more than 1,200 struggling young readers last year. Mile High United Way’s Colorado Reading Corps trains AmeriCorps members to deliver evidence-based interventions to kindergarten through third-grade students in three districts across Metro Denver.

YOUR generosity makes progress possible.

Meet Layden

Layden struggled with reading. By third grade, it was clear that he was behind his peers. His mom was thrilled when he was selected to participate in Mile High United Way’s Colorado Reading Corps. Since third-grade literacy is a strong predictor of high school graduation, programs like our Colorado Reading Corps are critically important.

Our Colorado Reading Corps pairs students with tutors to work on reading skills using research-based techniques. Layden worked with his tutor, Mr. Lewis, every day for a full school year, and he made great progress. By the end of his year, he was not only excited about reading chapter books, but all of his school work was stronger.

“I can’t thank Mr. Lewis enough,” said Layden’s mom, Chandra. “He really inspired Layden.”

Support that empowers youth

Youth exiting the child welfare system face tough economic, social, and emotional challenges. Mile High United Way’s Bridging the Gap hosts events throughout the year to address these needs. Volunteers and donors like you have helped us improve the lives of youth in transition. Thank you.
TOGETHER, WE HELP YOUTH SUCCEED AND DEVELOP TOMORROW’S TALENT.

YOUR support helps empower youth to create their own successful futures. Together, we are developing tomorrow’s talent.

Alongside donors like you, we are working to ensure that Metro Denver’s youth graduate from high school ready for post-secondary education and entry into the workforce. As part of this work, we assist youth who are facing daily challenges – including homelessness and lack of support.

Youth exiting the child welfare system are among the most vulnerable people in Metro Denver. Hundreds of new 18-year-olds are released from the child welfare system each year in Colorado.* Research shows that more than one in five will become homeless after age 18. To ensure these youth have the support they need, Mile High United Way’s Bridging the Gap served 165 youth last year.

Your generous investment supports Mile High United Way-led programs like Bridging the Gap, and community-led programs for youth that offer out-of-school activities, mentoring, and educational support, to ensure all youth are afforded opportunities that lead to post-secondary education or the workforce.

8,828 youth were mentored by positive adult role models
9,592 students received educational support

United, our impact is greater

Together, we positively impacted the lives of 69,795 youth last year.

<50% At age 24, fewer than half of youth exiting the child welfare system are employed.

102 Mile High United Way Bridging the Gap participants were employed during the last year.

Meet Tai

Growing up, all Tai wanted was a stable family. Her reality was the opposite. She lived in 15 foster homes before age 18. After she graduated from high school, she went straight into the Army, and after she received an honorable discharge, she became homeless.

Then, she found Mile High United Way’s Bridging the Gap. Bridging the Gap helped Tai get on her feet: she received a housing voucher to support her in an apartment, and personalized coaching to help guide her as she connected to community services, set future goals, and worked to attain them.

“I've never had such supportive people in my life, ever,” Tai said. “Housing, my budget, school – anything you can think of, Mile High United Way's Bridging the Gap has been there for me.”

With Mile High United Way’s support, Tai found steady work. She is interning with Colorado’s Department of Human Services, and hopes to use her experience to help others facing obstacles like her own.

Mile High United Way’s 2-1-1 Help Center connects individuals with resources for basic needs, but also with specialized information like immigration assistance, support for human trafficking victims, veterans assistance, and mobilizing our help center in the event of a disaster or epidemic. New this year is Skillful, a partnership with the Markle Foundation, to help middle-skilled job seekers advance their careers; and our expanded Child Care Options program, which refers families to child care.
TOGETHER, WE HELP CREATE ECONOMIC OPPORTUNITY FOR ALL.

YOUR generosity helps provide immediate interventions to ensure people in our community can meet their basic needs and progress toward financial success. Together, we are creating economic opportunity for all.

The increasing cost of living in Metro Denver is forcing families to make hard decisions. When an unexpected expense of $400 can move a family from self-sufficiency to financial emergency,* we know that community support is necessary to ensure that everyone has the opportunity to support themselves and their families.

Mile High United Way’s Centers for Family Opportunity also provide ways for families to improve their financial literacy. Housed in two locations in the Metro Denver area, our Centers provide classes and coaching to help individuals learn new skills that could lead to steady employment, receive financial counseling, and connect with others in their community.

With your support, Mile High United Way is focused on helping individuals in need, now and into the future.

Mile High United Way's Centers for Family Opportunity
Two of Adelayda’s sons were attending College View Elementary School when a Mile High United Way Center for Family Opportunity launched at the school. Here, adults can access multiple, free services to support their long-term financial success. With encouragement from her sons, Adelayda began meeting one-on-one with a financial coach at the Center to learn how to build a balanced household budget, pay off debt, save more money, and improve her credit score. And she began taking ESL classes to prepare for obtaining her GED certification, all at the same trusted, familiar location where her children attend school.

“Being involved with Mile High United Way’s Center for Family Opportunity has helped me and my children hold each other accountable for our learning,” said Adelayda. “I know that my family will succeed if everyone is succeeding.”

UNITED, our impact is greater
In addition to Mile High United Way’s 2-1-1 Help Center and our Centers for Family Opportunity, your investment supports the work of our impact partners to help create economic opportunity for all.

Together, we made a positive impact on 188,122 adults and their families last year.

1,476,470 meals provided
450,049 shelter nights provided

74,761 People contacted our 2-1-1 Help Center, looking for assistance and referrals.

One in eight people in Metro Denver are living at or below the poverty level.*

United Neighborhoods™

“Mile High United Way's volunteers did more in one day than we could accomplish in a full year,” said Gilberto Muñoz, principal of Swansea Elementary School (right), “And they did more than just paint the walls and clean up the grounds. They helped bolster the morale of teachers.”
LONG-TERM CHANGE TAKES TIME AND A UNITED APPROACH.

Mile High United Way’s United Neighborhoods™

Mile High United Way’s United Neighborhoods™ works to revitalize the most under-resourced neighborhoods in Metro Denver by partnering with residents who care deeply about creating economic opportunity in their community.

We have spent the past year with Globeville, Elyria, and Swansea community residents, educators, public officials, and community leaders to learn about issues facing their neighborhood. We’ve been listening, identifying their needs, and collaboratively setting ways to measure progress toward four goals important to their community:

- Housing
- Health
- Workforce
- Education

Volunteer UNITED

Last year, 7,766 Mile High United Way volunteers invested 114,343 hours to improve our community. Our volunteers spent time reading with children, tutoring, serving meals, mentoring youth entering the workforce, hosting supply drives, and participating in hundreds of days of service. And their impact was greater than the sum of their activities.

We hosted 2,366 community volunteers last year at Mile High United Way’s Bridging the Gap Career Week, Children’s Holiday Party, and our other volunteer events.

Additionally, employees from 115 companies engaged in 221 Corporate Days of Service, customized to their needs. And in our School Partners Program, 742 volunteers from 12 companies read with Power Lunch students and tutored TutorMate students, serving nearly 500 children who attend Denver Public Schools.

Nearly 7,800 Mile High United Way volunteers invested the equivalent of $2.9 million in service hours.

TOGETHER, WE’RE

Inviting collaboration

The Mile High United Way Morgridge Center for Community Change is a mission-centered community hub. Within the building, our CoBank Leadership Center provides collaboration space for public, private, philanthropic, and local nonprofit organizations to address the community’s toughest challenges.

Families can select gifts for their children, make holiday crafts, take photos with Santa, and more. Our new building has allowed the event to increase in size and we can now offer more activities to participating families.

Advocating for long-term change

During the 2016 legislative session, Mile High United Way worked with our elected leaders, policymakers, and partners to tackle our community's big issues. Together, we are creating long-term, systemic change to improve the odds for the families and individuals in Metro Denver, and across the state. During the past year's session, we supported 14 bills to remove barriers and create pathways to success for all.

House Bill 1227, signed into Colorado law on May 19, 2016, helped eliminate one of the key barriers for teen parents and domestic violence survivors seeking access to child care. A two-generation strategy to break the cycle of poverty, the bill ensures that young children have quality care, while teen moms complete their high school education.

Supporting the nonprofit sector

When you invest in Mile High United Way, you are supporting a range of activities designed to improve and enhance our ability to sustain community impact over time.

Mile High United Way’s Performance Collaborative was created in response to the growing need for evaluation and capacity building work in the nonprofit community. Five participating organizations contributed 269 hours – the equivalent of more than a month of full-time work – to almost 200 Mile High United Way coaching sessions designed to strengthen their community impact.

This year, we held a graduation ceremony for the five nonprofits that completed our two-year program. Congratulations to Mile High United Way’s Bridging the Gap, Florence Crittenton Services of Colorado, Denver Urban Scholars, Project VOYCE (Voices of Youth Changing Education), and Girls Incorporated of Metro Denver.

“Overall [Mile High United Way’s The Performance Collaborative] allowed us to reflect on who we are as an agency, what we do well, and what we want to continue to do. It gave us tools and coaching to continue to use data to drive our decisions.” – Denver Urban Scholars

Mile High United Way and our partner agency, Florence Crittenton Services of Colorado, were strong supporters of HB 1227. Angelica, pictured here, like other teen parents benefitting from the legislation, shared her story at our annual Women United Community Baby Shower.
TOGETHER, WE ARE CHANGING THE ODDS.

*Social Innovation Fund Partner   Impact and Social Innovation Fund Partner
This past year, 132 community members like you – including stakeholders, donors, subject-matter experts, business and community leaders, and Board members – participated in a rigorous and competitive selection process to determine our 2016-2018 Mile High United Way Strategic Investment Grant partners.

We received 200 proposals, requesting $16 million in funding to address community needs. Of these requests, our Board members selected 84 partner organizations that are serving Metro Denver communities, and are implementing strategies directly aligned with Mile High United Way’s four Community Impact Goals:

Giving All Children a Strong Start
Ensuring all children enter school ready to succeed.

Reading Matters
Ensuring all children are reading at or above grade level by the end of third grade.

Developing Tomorrow’s Talent
Ensuring all youth graduate from high school ready for post-secondary education or the workforce.

Creating Economic Opportunity for All
Ensuring people can meet their basic needs and have opportunities to move toward economic success.

We were incredibly proud to have so much interest and participation in what was truly a UNITED decision-making process for our 2016 - 2018 grantees. Thank you to everyone who volunteered.

Mile High United Way Emerging Leaders Council

Mile High United Way's Emerging Leaders Council Supplies for Success event.
Women United is a community of women giving to Mile High United Way at or above the Leadership level ($1,000 or more each year). Their mission is to inspire, educate, and motivate women to become agents of change in our community through philanthropy, leadership, and volunteerism. Alliance members meet regularly to plan volunteer opportunities and special events, including our annual Women United Luncheon, that are open to the greater Women United network.

Frances Wisebart Jacobs was one of the original founders of United Way, in Denver in 1887. The Mile High United Way Frances Wisebart Jacobs Award is given to women who have made a significant impact on the community and on women’s philanthropy.

We celebrate the life of Harold Ames Dewing, III, or “Sandy,” who was extraordinarily generous to us in his lifetime, and left a donation in his will that resulted in the largest legacy gift in Mile High United Way’s 129-year history. Sandy was blessed with a great spirit of empathy, especially for those who had less and were experiencing hard times, and we are humbled and proud to help him extend his legacy of support for the community.
